How Donald Duck Got on U.S. Payroll

By Bill Drummond

WASHINGTON. Oct 27 - The General Accounting Office disclosed yesterday that it successfully inserted Donald Duck's name on the payroll of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development - and gave him a salary of $99,999 a year.

The department computer, which is supposed to head off such shenanigans, not only failed to detect the "hiring" of the cartoon character, it raised no objections to his salary — more than twice the legal limit of $47.500 for a civil-service job. It was not revealed what, if any, task Donald was supposed to perform at HUD, where 16,000 employees are charged with "providing for sound development of the nation's communities and metropolitan areas.

Officials of the GAO, Congress' watchdog over federal spending. disclosed the incident in testimony before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee's subcommittee on compensation and employce benefits. The subcommittee is looking into abuses of federal overtime pay.

$1.5 Billion Overtime

Last fiscal year the government spent $1.5 hillion on overtime pay, an increase of $300 million over the previous year.

After hearing the GAO officials, Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Mo., the subcommittee chairman, remarked, "If Donald Duck can earn as much as he did, then something is very wrong . . . We must assure that every system is foolproof and fraud-proof,"

John Cronin, assistant director of GAO, said Donald Duck's name was one of 30 fictitious identifies placed in the HUD payroll system to determine whether an employee skilled in computer manipulations could defraud the government, or whether the system could thwart such efforts. The computer detected none of the 30 phony names, Mr. Cronin said.

He testified that 40 percent of the government's payroll systems have not been approved by the GAO, although under a 26-year-old law the agency is supposed to review and approve all such federal half the federal budget - were the "most derelict" in moving to establish safeguarded payroll systems.

H.L. Krieger, director of the GAO personnel and compensation division, told the subcommittee about the results of spot checks the agency had conducted at four government offices — the Drug Enforcement Agency, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the U.S. Forest Ser-

GAO found numerous weaknesses in accounting procedures, as well as several possible cases of fraud, which bave been referred to the Justice Department for possible prosecution, Mr. Krieger said. Mr. Krieger also said he had been informed that the Internal Revenue Service intended to prosecute 13 suspected cases of overtime abuse and that HEW had uncovered five apparent cases of overtime fraud, involving a total of $75,000.

European Common Market's energy commissioner urged world oil producers today not to raise prices at their meeting in December and called on the United States to take strong action to cut oil consumption -- possioly including a consumer price hike. The remarks by Guido Brunner were the first direct comment by the nine-nation European bloc on the mid-December meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries [OPEC] in Abu Dhabi, and one of the sharpest European warnings to the United States on energy consumption. My feeling is that something additional is now needed by the U.S. government after the measures already taken," Mr. Brunner said. referring to the progress made in implementing U.S. energy-saving programs. Otherwise, we will glide into a situation of increasing energy consumption.'

On OFEC oil prices, Mr. Brunner said that "a price increase at this stage is not warranted by the market situation." He conceded that the dollar's falling value has cost oil producers money, but he added. "That, on its own, is not a good enough reason for a rise in prices in the oil sector."

"My concern is particular directed at the effect that an increase [in oil prices] could have on the value of the dollar." Mr. Brunner, a West German, said. He predicted that OPEC countries will continue to use the dollar as the pricing mechanism for oil and added that "it would be good from the point of view of the OPEC countries - from the dollar standpoint - to omit a price increase at this stage."

Mr. Brunner said that the Common Market nations have not increased their energy consumption since 1973, but that U.S. consumpion has kept increasing.

He noted that President Carter,

L the Western econome summit in 24 ray in Bonn, promised to reduce oil consumption by 2.5 million—s a day by 1985.

Brunner said he believed Ansteric Sand he control nited States is needed to counter increasing oil imports. But he declined to propose any percentage increases or to state how they should be accomplished. He strongly suggested, however, that the U.S. action be taken before the OPEC meeting starting Dec. 16, presumably in an effort to head off a price increase there. Since Congress has adjourned for the year, Mr. Brunner was asked if he favored administrative action by Mr. Carter to raise the price of U.S. oil imports.

"It is perhaps too technical an interpretation, but as regards the general trend it is the right interpre-tation." Mr. Brunner replied.

He predicted that the economics and energy ministers of the Com-mon Market countries, who will meet Monday in Luxembourg, will make a strong "political statement of will on energy policy."

MOSCOW, Oct. 27 (WP) - The Soviet union bas warned several Western European countries that selling arms to China is likely to cause "very big damage" to hilater-al relations with Moscow and could even bring about unspecified retaliation. Soviet diplomatic sources

The settlements decision, informed sources said, appeared to have been prompted by two considerations. First, Mr. Begin appeared keen to retaliate for what he and his ministers regarded as unduly pro-Arab sentiments expressed durweck by U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders. New Settlements by Israel May Be Built in December

From Wire Dispatches
TEL AVIV, Oct. 27 — The director-general of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's office said today he expected that Israel would establish new settlements on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan by mid-December.

The comment in a radio interview by Eliahu Ben-Elissar were made after Mr. Begin received a sharply worded message from President Carter expressing dissatisfac-tion with Israel's decision Wednesday night to expand existing settle-ments in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Mr. Ben-Elissar, the head of the Israeli delegation to the Cairo peace talks last December, said that the angry U.S. reaction to the settlements announcement was "artificial and meant to serve certain ends." He did not elaborate. "The Egyptians knew well that Israel intended to continue to thicken existing settlements in Judea and Samaria [the West Bank]."

Mr. Ben-Elissar said. "There is no connection between the thickening of the settlements and the peace negotiations between Israel and Egypt," he said, "I bope that at the end of three months after the signing of the Camp David accords new settlements will be established in Judea and Samaria."

Sadat, Begin Win Nobel Prize For Middle East Peace Efforts

Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat in Jerusalem last year

OSLO, Oct. 27 (UPI) - President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel jointly won the 1978 Nobel Peace Prize today and President Carter received praise from the Nobel Committee for his role in aiding Middle East peace.

Mr. Sadat and Mr. Begin share 725,000 Swedish kronor ($172,000) which will be awarded here on Dec. 10. the anniversary of Alfred Nobel's death. Mr. Carter, who took a direct role in peace negotiations at the Camp David summit in September, could not be considered for the prize because nominations had to be received by February. Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had nominated Mr. Sadat for his historic visit to Jerusalem last November. The committee refused to say who bad nominated Mr. Begin. There was some disappointment in Egypt that Mr. Sadat bad to share the prize with Mr. Begin, but otherwise Egyptians were delighted with the award.

In Jerusalem, Moshe Alon, the Foreign Ministry's deputy director-general for European affairs, said that Mr. Begin was happy to receive the Nobel Peace Prize

Mr. Alon said that he called Mr. Begin's bome just before the start of the Sabbath, "He thanked me very much. He was very cordial. I wished him all the best and he wished me a happy Sabbath."

In Washington, Mr. Carter congratulated Mr. Sadat and Mr.Begin on their prize and said, "The work you have done so far must not be left uncompleted." In half a dozen countries, including Uganda and Equatorial Guinea, direct control of broadcasting has been taken over by the president himself.
With Africa's problems of il-by far the most important medium on the continent." said Peter Mwura, head of the University of Nairobi's journalism school. "It simply has no competition at all. Unlike the Western world. the radio is used in Africa for developmental purposes. Govern-ments use it not to inform the people entirely, but to tell them

good for them to know."

Ugandan President Idi Amin, for instance, announced last month that he was setting up a human rights committee. But, because there were no human rights violations in Uganda, according to President Amin, he announced that he was freeing two police of-ficers who were charged with beating to death 12 prisoners at Naguru Prison. Few African governments bother to pretend that veracity is an element in their broadcasts. Samora Machel, president of Marvist Mozambique, last year defined the role of the information sector this way: "It must be a weapon of the Mozambican working people in their struggle against capitalism and imperialism and for the construction of the bases of a Socialist society. In this context, no ambiguity, no compromise, no transigence can be permitted.

Many countries have both internal and external services, and the content of those broadcasts radically varies. Somalia broadcasts an hour a day to Ethiopia, then turns its transmitting antenna southwestward and broadcasts to Kenva. Britain Rushes Weapons For Defense of Zambia

LONDON, Oct. 27 (AP) — Britain announced today the dispatch of an airborne consignment of defense weapons to Zambia and said that the air defense and ground equipment is to be supplied free. A Foreign Office announcement also made clear that the arms are being rushed to Zambia partly because of neighboring Rhodesia's recent air raids on guerrilla bases

"This equipment, for use by the Zambian armed forces and police, is being supplied on the clear understanding that it will be used for no nther purpose than the defense of Zambia, a fellow member of the Commonwealth, and in particular of its capital city," the British statement said.

West Ready to Consider New Aid Package to Zaire

PARIS, Oct. 27 (IHT) - Western governments who have been aiding the recovery of Zaire since the Shaha invasion last spring will meet in Brussels next mooth to consider a new assistance package, probably worth about $500 million, mainly to cover the foreign exchange needs of Zaire's slowly rebuilding economy, according to business and other sources.

The initial three-month phase of the Western rescue plan for President Mobutu Sese Seko has been reasonably successful, but slower than hoped," a source said.

Zaire has achieved a political re-conciliation with its hostile neighbors and has started attracting once-dissident refugees back to have arisen in rebuilding the Zairian Army and improving the country's financial administration.

Despite initially encouraging signs, Zaire's credit-rating still reflects investor skepticism.

"Zaire couldn't borrow a dime commercially," a banker said. Other sources argued that the Shaba invasion, the second in two years, finally "scared" Mr. Mobutu into cooperating in implementing reforms urged by his Western and African supporters.

The Western plan, which essentially constitutes economic and sepervision and some political gui-dance, was divided into three stages: an emergency $117 million in short-term aid in June, the addi-tional credits under consideration and, ultimately, a long-range "Mobutu plan" to attract $1 billion in investment to develop Zaire's abundant mineral resources.

Already Shaba's copper mines are back in operation. Foreign technicians, mostly Belgians, without their families, are protected by an inter-African force drawn from Senegal, Morocco and other friend-

A political indicator is the quickening return of refugees to Shaba from Angola. The retraining of the Zairian Army is also behind schedule. France is training a paratroop brigade (a French-trained unit was dropped oo Kolwezi) and Belgium is training a mechanized brigade to produce a small, disciplined force to defend Shaba.

However, the Zairian units need a reliable administrative service "so the soldiers get paid regularly and don't start stealing from the local population," a source explained. The inter-African force, original-

While the forthcoming Brussels meeting is "not a pledging conference" for Western governments, it is expected to lead to an IMF plan to be funded by governments. Although Mr. Mobutu has been evasive in the past, he has appeared cooperative this time and largely blameless for the delays, the sourc-

There is hardly a household, oo matter how poor, without one.

Given radio's huge audience in Africa, it is not surprising that control of the radio station is always a prime target during a coup. "We went through a long, hun-gry period after 1969 when the vio-lence started," said Larry Nixon of the Northern Ireland Commerce Department. "Now were back in the ball game."

But he warned. "American companies already operating here have now reached saturation point. We must find other investors to keep up the pace of development."

Government officials fear that unless substantial investment continues, Northern Ireland's economy will decline sharply, rekiodling sec-tarian violence which in turn will scare off much-needed investment. Virtually all investment halted in 1969. Terrorists of the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Repoblican Army, fighting to end British rule and Protestant domination of the province, bombed businesses and factories and assassinated business leaders in a bid to wreck the econo-

Twenty factories were destroyed by bombs and city centers were gutted. A recent report by a Cam-bridge University economies team estimated that the troubles have cost 20,000 jobs. World recession also slowed investment.

Source of Unrest

The British last year launched a drive to revive the province's battered economy and ease a major source of unrest.

The government put together incentive packages aimed primarily at U.S. businesses seeking a tariff-dodging base within the European Common Market. It also stressed Ulster's lack of labor unrest and high productivity.

The incentives include tax relief, construction and machinery grants of up to 50 percent, government loans to get enterprises off the ground and low factory rents. Northern Ireland Secretary Roy

Mason declared: "We've created a package of financial inducements which is one of the best in Western

2 By-Election Triumphs Boost British Labor Party

LONDON, Oct. 27 (NYT) — A pair of by-election successes has given Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government not only two extra votes for its coming showdown with op-position parties, but also a consid-erable psychological boost at a crucial moment.

Labor candidates triumphed yes-terday in the constituencies of Pontefract and Castleford, io Yorkshire, and Berwick and East Lothian, in the Scottish lowlands. The results of the voting, anconneed early today, showed a swing of 0.75 percent to Labor in Scotland and a swing of 7.9 percent to the Tories in Yorkshire. The two oew members are John Home Robertson, 30, who defeated Margaret Marshall in Berwick and East Lothian, and George Loft-house who defeated Hugo Page in Pontefract and Castleford, Minorparty candidates trailed badly io both of the constituencies. A Tory spokesman said that he was "bitterly disappointed." Taking into account the by-election results as well as the death this morning of David Walder, 49, the Conservative member of Parlia-ment for Clitheroe in Lancashire, Mr. Callaghan's government now has 14 seats less than the combined opposition. But Labor has three allies among members who are technically in opposition, so the realistic count is 311 to 319, a deficit of only 8 votes. Thus, Mr. Callaghan will survive the vote of confidence that is to follow the queen's speech next month if he can hold his troops in line and persuade the 11 Scottish nationalisis either to support him or abstain. That seems highly likely, as the nationalists fared badly yes-quick general election. The victories were a boost for the prime minister's struggle to limit wage increases to 5 percent through an incomes policy, and they apparently reflected public confusion over the conservative approach to ioflation-fighting. Margaret Thatcher, the Tory leader, and Edward Heath, her predecessor, pub-ticly disagreed on the issue during campaign visits to Scotland, and Mr. Home Robertson worked hard to exploit the split.

Embarrassing Questions Raised

Spanish Communists Avoid Recalling Trotsky Killer

MADRID, Oct. 27 (NYT) -The reported death last week of Ramon Mercader, the Spanish Communist who murdered Trotsky in 1940, has stirred faint, guilty murmurs on the Spanish left, and a notable silence among embarrassed Communists.
Neither Mundo Obrero, the official organ of the "Eurocommunist" party, nor La Calle, a Communist-lining weekly, has reported or commented on Mercader, who is said to have died on Oct. 18 of bone cancer in a Havana hospital.

The shadowy Mercader, recruited by Stalin's intelligence agency GPU to murder the legendary Boldery snevice and rounder of the Rou-ish Communists, who today pride themselves on their independence from Soviet dictates. Moreover, too much probing into Mercader's past risks linking it with the earlier incamations of Spanish Communists who today hold positions of some authority. In a savage autobiographical un-burdening published last year,

A successful novelist, Mr. Semprun entitled one of his pieces of fiction, published in 1969, "The Second Death of Ramon Mercader." Last week he penned a brief political obituary in a Madrid daily called "The Last Death of Ramon Mercader" in which he asked:

"And today, in this day of Ramoo Mercader's death, after so many decades of obstinate and fierce silence, will the companions of youth of this self-sacrificing comrade speak? Will they tell us, oow without risk, punishment or glory, the truths of his distant past? Will they explain to us, finally, the many things they know about that

So far, only two persons have taken up Mr. Semprun's rhetorical invitation. In its cover story, the leftist magazine Triunfo this week carried two articles that remind today's Communists that Mercader, an enthusiastic young Communist who fought and was wounded in the civil war, was only one of many who blindly followed Stalin.

"One has to have lived those years of deformation, critical years lived by so many of us, to under stand to what point all of we 'offi-cial' Communists of those days were guilty of Trotsky's death," writes Ricardo Munoz Suay, a former Communist, who urges that others, too, dig into their memories, Ramon Mercader was one more, but the other executioners — we don't even know their names."

who knew Mercader during the civil war, disclosed that she and others believed Stalin's assertion that Trotsky was a "Fascist agent" and kept their silence when they recognized photographs of the assassin, who maintained during 20 years in a Mexican prison that he was a Belgian named Jacques Mornard.

Miss Pamics also suggested that Mercader's example should prompt Communists to understand how a militant could have been used for a crime coully prepared in Beria's [Lavrenti Beria, head of the Soviet secret police under Stalin] labora-

It was only in 1952 that Mercader's cover story was broken. Prison guards heard the convicted assassin humming a lullaby in his native Catalan — a language known by few Belgians — and investigations quickly led back to Spain, where Franco's police turned up a hefty old file on Mercader, including his

But, in an unusual move of mentioning another statesman in the citation — hinting that President Carter could have been a co-winner if he had been nominated in time — the committee said that Mr. Carter had played a great role.

N.Y. Press-Manning Issue Delegated to Factfinder yesterday that there "appears to be a conspiracy" between the publish-ers of the city's other major dailies

Toward Mideast Peace

Not without some jostling, the negotiation of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty is proceeding apace. Jimmy Carter personally helped negotiate the compromise draft that both governments have now approved, Israel with certain amendments; Egypt demands some alterations, too. In gaining Cabinet approval of the draft, as in the Knesset vote terminating the Sinai settlements, Menachem Begin has been ready to put the drive for peace ahead of political loyalties cemented over 40 years. The two negotiating teams are again back at full strength in Washington, and they hope to complete a treaty by the anniversary of Anwar Sadat's Jerusalem visit on Nov. 19.

That is, in our view, the proper and posi-tive context in which to view the latest flap over Israeli settlement in the West Bank. Mr. Begin, to keep his opposition from spoiling the treaty with Egypt, wanted to show there was no literal or direct linkage between Israel's decision to evacuate the Sinai and its determinatio to hold on to the West Bank and Gaza, under new conditions, pending future negotiations. Evidently, he also wanted to retort politically to statements U.S. diplomats have made to Jordan and West Bank Palestinians to draw them into those later talks. Both purposes were served by his announcement that Israel will expand some existing West Bank settlements. The State Department pronounced itself "deeply disturbed."

It is a three-level charade. First, the Israeli announcement was entirely political, and, given that only a handful of those Israelis claiming a right to settle in the West Bank actually wish to live there, it may not lead to any new settlers. Second, the protests are also political, and there is no reason to think that progress toward an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty will be slowed. Finally, the logic of events will in time almost certainly produce an accommodation on the West Bank anyway. This is likely, no matter whether Israel makes provocative remarks on settle-ments or Palestinians decry Camp David or King Hussein holds himself aloof, as all are doing now.

The really important development right now has to do with the attitude not of Israel or Egypt, but of Saudi Arabia, Egypt's principal patron and banker. The Saudis, it appears, are coming around to a position of support for Mr. Sadat's peace policy. They're keeping the money flowing and trying to restrain attacks by other Arabs. They have just agreed, for the first time in 30 years, to let Israeli Arabs make the pilgrimage to Mecca. That is inadequate to those who insist upon nice, neat, hard edges on their politics. But it will be of great help to Mr. Sadat in standing up to the more radical Arabs' attempts to drag him down. The peace process, in brief, continues to move ahead.

Gifted Children

In recent years, the federal government has taken a series of belated steps to identify, encourage and nurture extremely bright children. In 1972, Congress set up the Federal Office for the Gifted and Talented, which has received $2.5 million a year since 1976. Another $6 million is channelled to giftedpupil programs through other federal agencies. But measured against other educational appropriations, those sums are far from over-

There are many explanations for the halfhearted approach. . . For one thing, young geniuses and their parents don't form a sizeable constituency. For another, efforts to identify gifted children conjure up dark visions of totalitarian "brain-farming." And finally, egalitarian-minded Americans. . .

are often simply uncomfortable with the fact that nature deals some children a dramatically better hand than others. Fortunately, there are signs that such attitudes may be on the wane. A House-Senau conference committee in Washington has proposed increasing appropriations for gifted-children programs by more than 500 percent. The legislative change, of course, ought to be accompanied by a realization on the part of educators that the compassionate ends of "special" and "adaptive" education apply to the gifted as well as the deprived. .

Neutron Bomb Backed

The president is still reserving judgment about deploying the neutron bomb, but at least he has decided to get started on building it. For which small favor, we ought to be grateful.

The neutron bomb is not really a bomh; it is a warhead for short-range missiles and artillery shells. It is a nuclear weapon, but it has far less explosive effect -- blast and heat - than conventional nukes. So it does less damage to the area in which it detonates...

This new warhead is made to order to deter - and to stop, if need be - the sort of armored blitz the Soviet Red Army has always favored for its offensives.

Therefore, quite understandably, the Soviet propaganda industry launched a worldwide campaign to portray this as an unthinkable weapon, too terrible to contemplate, let alone build.

Not so understandable, but at least predietable, was the next step: Leftist spokesmen around the world trooped right along with this Soviet lead, wagging their tails behind them. . . Not at all understandable indeed, downright incredible --- was the earlier decision of our own commander in chief to bow to this self-serving, Soviet-led propagan-da move and put off a huildup of the new and effective antitank defense for Western

With 40,000 tanks and armored infantry carriers to match, the Soviets now have the armored might to overrun Europe with one quick thrust. The neutron warhead gives the West a way to stop such a blitz. And when that warhead is built and deployed, it will give the Soviet brass pause, should they be tempted to launch such an attack.

On Storing A-Wastes

An interagency review group commissioned by President Carter concludes that nuclear wastes can be safely stored underground.

That is not news to anyone familiar with the research done by government and private groups in the 33 years since the first atomic bomb was exploded.

The plan is to inject nuclear wastes into geologic formations which have been stable for millions of years. The review notes there will be problems involved in such underground storage, however. Not technical problems, but political problems,

The reviewers said public consensus will be essential to the success of nuclear waste storage and therefore called for extensive public review of scientific information.

That is a reasonable approach. But it contains a basic problem. Consensus does not mean 100 percent agreement. The existence of a minority dedicated to stopping nuclear power development guarantees a fight to stop the disposal of nuclear wastes underground.

No means of disposal will satisfy this group, which contends nuclear wastes can't be stored safely. . . The problem is not how to store the wastes but how to deal with a minority that refuses to accept the decision of the majority.

Indexing Tax Rates

Following on the heels of such politically specialized terms as "sunset laws" and "zerohased budgeting," another word with governmental overtones has moved onto the scene.

Our reference is to "indexing" or "indexation," by which is meant, in its most familiar connotations, the gearing of tax rates to fluc-tuations of inflation. The purpose behind this recommended linkage is to prevent a taxpayer's being penalized by hemg forced into a higher tax bracket.

This example is heing cited by congressional backers of indexations: a family of four with a 1977 income of $15,000 would need $16,200 in 1978 just to keep pace with the inflated cost of living. But the higher income, by putting the wage-earner into a higher tax bracket, would boost his tax obligation by $260, representing an outright loss.

The idea is picking up steam in Congress, but has some obstacles to overcome before it becomes incorporated into law, if indeed it does. Among them is the fear. . . it would produce unacceptable revenue losses.

The concept has considerable merit, especially with respect to its application to income taxes. . . The process is not as simple as some proponents would have us believe, but it certainly deserves careful considera-

The Forgotten Good News

By James Reston

WASHINGTON — Some unusual and even hopeful things have been happening recently in the politics of the world, and the surprising thing is that so little attention has been paid to their historical significance. For example:

A Start O waster of hister heads.

After 40 years of bitter hostil-ity, China and Japan, despite the open opposition of the Soviet Union, have signed a treaty of "peace and friendship."

After two generations of war, Israel and Egypt have at least agreed "in principle," despite the opposition of other Arab states and some political factions within the Begin government, to the Camp David terms of peace.

 The United States and the Soviet Union have made progress in the Vance-Gromyko talks in Moscow toward a second strategic arms agreement, and have also agreed to a new round of negotiations to limit military arms sales in Latin America and ban the introduction of military weapons in outer space.

By lifting the arms embargo on Turkey, the United States has eased the NATO crisis in the Eastern Mediterranean and improved the chances for a Greek-Turkish compromise in Cyprus.

After all, this is not a catalogue of failures. Nothing has been set-tled, but the process of negotiation and even the spirit of compromise bave improved recently moving on the economic and financial tangles of the major industrial nations and the racial struggle of sub-Sahara Africa.

The tendency now, and under-standably, is to concentrate on the problems that remain — for they are serious and even ominous problems that could shatter the hopes of a better world order — but there is at the same time a more serious dialogue now between the nations about the common problems of peace, inflation, population, and the cost of the arms race that should not be minimized

The visit to Japan of the Chinese vice premier, Teng Hsiao-ping, il-lustrates this changing tone and de-veloping mood of compromise. There were some issues that couldn't be settled in a burry, Teng said — for example the funre of Taiwan, South Korea, and the conflict between China and Japan over the control of the Senkaku Islands. He didn't concede anything on these points, but emphasized the importance of avoiding "tension" and giving "time" a chance to work toward a settlement of differences over Taiwan and Korea. Peking was "waiting" for Washington to make up its mind to settle the Taiwan question he said, but he emphasized, "on Peking's terms." He expected the division of Korea to be resolved "in due course." On the future of the Senkaku

Islands, be merely observed that China and Japan differed on this and had agreed to avoid trying to settle it now. It was a time, he suggested, in Kipling's phrase, for "judicious leaving alone." By Chinese wisdom," Teng remarked, "this is the only way. It is shelved for an indefinite period of time." Perhaps, be added, the next generation will resolve the Senkakus prob-

Teng, in his first Western-style news conference, even introduced a more startling idea into the conduct of world affairs. According to William Chapman of The Washington Post, he told the reporters in Tokyo that he wasn't "very bright," and invited them to criticize him if his answers to their questions were unclear. No such concession or invitation has ever been offered by ence, and African experts here say persuade Mugabe, who feared

So apparently something new is happening now these days and no-body is quite sure what it is, Washington is in closer contact with Peking and Moscow than they are with one another. Tokyo is more deeply involved with industrial Enterest and North America then it is rope and North America than it is with Asia, and is creating a more effective co-prosperity sphere in the Pacific by commerce than it was able to do by war in the tragic

Republicans are losing the allegiance of their former liberal or conservative supporters. Carter is deep trouble with Kennedy, McGovern, organized labor, the intellectuals, and even the blacks. At the same time, the Republicans cannot organize that middle class, middle America constituency they used to talk so much about. At least they cannot organize it and they cannot organize them around their aging conservative leaders — Reagan, Ford and Connally — and they will not encourage or rally around the Bakers and Bushes of the rising Republican generation.

Still, maybe this is not all bad. Wherever you look in the world today, institutions are questioning their assumptions and prejudices, and having to adapt to events. Prime Minister Callahan of Britain, for example, is telling his old trade union collectors that he will suffer union colleagues that he will suffer their strikes this winter and even tisk defeat at the polls rather than lose the battle against inflation. President Carter has read the news from California on Proposition 13, and is campaigning for tax cuts, and other conservative principles. The same confusion or doubt of policies is confounding or educating the political parties here in the United States. Both Democrats and Republicans are losing the allegation of the leaders of the leade In short, there seems to be a new doubt the ideologies and prejudices of the past, and are looking for new answers to the new problems of a different technological and philosophical age.

> So far they haven't found the answers, but at least they are talking to one another and even searching with one another for compromises, and above all, trying to avoid confrontations and economic or physical wars. Nobody is saying, by God, he is right. Everywhere there is doubt, and maybe when there is doubt there's a possibility of compromise and even hope.

Ken Pottinger From Lisbon:

A mood of destruction is said to be advancing over the Alentejo, especially in the more remote and traditionally poorer eastern region.

ISBON — Carlos Mota Pinto, the 43-year-old law professor chosen as Portugal's latest premier, will find himself facing what 10 preceding postrevolutionary gov-ernments here have faced and failed to resolve — the explosive is-sue of agricultural reform.

Agriculture is a leitmotiv run-Agriculture is a lettmotiv run-ning through the country's political crises — it is vital to the success of Portugal's 1985 entry to the Euro-pean Economic Community and it hangs over the long-term economic recovery that the International Monetary Fund's austerity plan aims for.

But agriculture is also tightly bound up with party politicking — with the clarion calls of the radical revolution in 1974 — and with two ideologically opposed streams of thought: large soviet style coopera-tives and small uneconomic, privately owned plots.

Wheat Belt

For several weeks, the Commu-nist-dominated Alentejo wheat belt, located south of Lisbon, has been in an uproar. The country's presidentially-backed caretaker government has been returning to former owners, parcels of land illegally incorporated into 450 giant cooperatives four years ago.

The Alentejo was once the pre-serve of rich absentee landlords, huge fallow estates and exploited peasants. The revolution changed all that and brought about a much needed agrarian reform. But it is an incomplete reform and one lacking in sound technological followthrough. Successive Socialist or Socialist-led governments since the 1976 par-liamentary elections have declined to move decisively to put agricul-ture in order. There has always been the fear of offending potenrially important electoral interests

No such obstacles have faced the interim government which, playing on this advantage, has acted forcefully to implement previously shelved legislation. As a result, there have been clashes between paramilitary police and peasants, sympathy strikes by industrial workers and harsh criticism from the Communist Party.

Sets of Ideas

However, a state of affairs where 33 percent of the labor force is employed in a sector which for many years has produced only 50 percent of Portugal's required basic foodstuffs, can obviously not be allowed

The agricultural ministry has one set of ideas for resolving the dilemma, the cooperatives another, and the conservative northern farmers, representing the second stream of thought, yet another.

But it is the Alentejo which is the hotspot at the moment and where just solutions must be found. Alentejo collective leaders say their units are being sabotaged by the removal of the parcels of land or reserves and they maintain the operation's long-term objective is to kill cooperative farming.

to kill cooperative farming.

They cite several related events to back this thesis. Last year, they claim, the government's seed-supply program distributed the wrong type of grain to the collectives. So instead of a 10-to-1 crop yield, the harvest was only 3 to 1 and the effects on farming moome were predictably devastating.

Agriculture credit has been cut off and even when the farms have a sound business deal, needing only shor-term financing, they have been denied the cash, collective workers say. (The government maintains that credit has been suspended in cases where the collec-tives have not presented proper an-nual accounts and the aim is to stop money being squandered.)

Such then are the perceived com-Such then are the perceived com-plaints of collective workers in the region. Whether they are accurately aimed is less important than the fact that the grievances now appear to be determining actions. A mood of destruction is said to be advanc-ing over the Alentejo, especially in the more remote and traditionally poorer eastern region.

Some collectives are said to be stripping cork trees —cork is a major export — and selling livestock and farm machinery to liquidate as many assets as possible in anticipation of the demise of the collective

Flames Fueled

Adding fuel to the flames, is a World Bank project to fund 156 private farms in the Alentejo where presently only 20 exist. To accommodate these plans, the process of returning illegally occupied land may need to be accelerated.

Successive agricultural minister have attacked low productivity and agricultural errors in the Alenteji deliberate Communist-inpire sabotage — a symptom, perhaps, o. : the heavily political nature of agri

Mugabe's Star Is Rising

ONDON - Ian Smith, the political contortionist who seems to survive every twist and turn in Rhodesia's tangled politics and who causes most of them himself, has done it again. He publicly agreed to attend a so-called all-par-nes conference on Rhodesia's future "without preconditions" on the same day that his air force's de-structive raids into Zambia made such a conference unlikely anytime

But British sources believe that these and other recent events in Rhodesia may have benefitted Smith less than the black nationalist leader, Robert Mugabe, whose guerrilla forces continue to operate with considerable effectiveness in much of Rhodesia.

By agreeing, as a sort of climax to his visit to the United States, to take part in an all-parties confer-ence. Smith probably improved his remarkable position as a "moder-ate" in U.S. public opinion. But British analysts, students of Smith and the Rhodesian snarl since 1965, question whether his agree-ment is anything more than another maneuver to preserve his posi-tion and gain time.

Opposed

In their view, there is little likelihood that an all-parties conference can succeed, or perhaps even be held, because Smith is known not to have changed his views on key questions — in effect, precondi-tions. He remains opposed, for example, to the use of black nationalist armed forces in combination with the white-controlled Rhodesian Army to provide internal security pending election of a majority-rule government.

Smith's black partners in the interim government, Ndabaningi Sithole and Bishop Abel Muzorewa, have long been bitterly opposed to an all-parties conferthere's no indication that they have changed their minds, whatever Smith's tactics. They think it more likely that the black leaders merely went along with him in the belief that the conference would never be

For that reason, there is some speculation here that the raids on guerrilla bases (and allegedly on some refugee camps) in Zambia were designed — in addition to their military purposes — to enrage both black nationalist leaders and the "frontline" states that support Joshua Nkomo, the leader of the nationalist group whose Zambian bases were bombed, duly de-nounced the idea of a meeting with Smith; then he flew to Moscow, presumably to seek more aid. But President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said more cautiously that he still supports an all-parties con-ference in principle, if it is conduct-ed along the lines of the Anglo-U.S. proposals for developing a majori-ty-rule government. That is the kind of precondingn that Smith has never yet been willing to accept.

For all his defiant talk, Nkomo was badly burt by the raids on his bases in Zambia. Not only did he suffer considerable losses, but it was made clear to the world that he is powerless to retaliate against Smith. His 10,000 well-armed (by the Russians) men form what is essentially a conventional army, not a guerrilla force; and there is little doubt that if this army took its only available course of action - an invasion of Rhodesia - Smith's forces could crush it.

Nkomo's military weakness was thus dramatized on the heels of his abortive meeting with Smith last summer, when Smith invited him into the government. Nkomo said be could not accept unless Mugabe also participated; but then, as it is understood here, he was unable to

2 Britons Get Jail for Insult To Greek Flag

VERROLA, Greece, Oct. 27 (AP)

— Two British schoolteachers were sentenced today to seven months' imprisonment on charges of tearing down the Greek flag in this northern Greek city, after they were ap-parently provoked by youths making improper suggestions.

They appealed the sentence and were set free pending retrial. The court ruled that the action by the women was a serious insult to Greece and its history and completely inexcusable, regardless of the fact that they may have been drunk or provoked by local youths seeking their favors.

The two women. Elizabeth Richardson, 22. and Alison Whewell. 22. were arrested Tuesday after allegedly tearing down the Greek flag hoisted on the city's central post office. They were chased and seized by a policeman who witnessed the incident.

The court said that the women, both English-language teachers at Verroia's language institutes, instead of serving the sentence, may pay the fine of 300 drachmas or $8.50 a day. This could mean a fine of 300 drachmas a fine of serving the serving that the serving the serving that the serving th of nearly $2,000 each over a 7-month period.

British Unions Agree to End 6-Week Hospital Strike

LONDON, Oct. 27 — Leaders of five labor unions agreed tonight to end a six-week strike that had crippled and closed down hospitals and reportedly resulted in the deaths of

Some patients.

Satisfied with a three-step approach to their demand for incentive honuses for 3,500 supervisory workers, the union chiefs called for an immediate return to normal working.

Details of the settlement plan were not announced.

But the hospital system was expected to take some time to recover from the most damaging strike in the 30-year history of the National Health Service.

Machinery Halted

During their walkout, the strikers refused to service machinery, operatc sterilizers or work laundries. The result: Six hospitals were closed, more than 9,000 hospital beds were left empty, more than 300 hospitals handled emergency services only, and more than 60,000 patients were added to waiting lists. Health Minister David Ennals pleaded with the unions a week ago. For God's sake, go back to work and stop playing about with peoples lives. There is no doubt that some people have al-

Mesrine: France's Anti-Hero

Gangster Has a Robin Hood Image

By Jane M. Friedman

PARIS (IHT) — Because of one man, a veter-an criminal lawyer with 25 years of service has retired; a freelance journalist has become a celebrity, and a major newsweekly has been indieted for glorifying a crime.

The cause of these changes, and others, is Jacques Mesrine, 41, the confessed author of 39 violent crimes, several of them murders, and a personality who has captivated France.

Mesrine, a sinewy man with dark hair, escaped from the top security section of Paris's Sante prison in May where he had been held since his conviction for armed robbery and attempted murder in May, 1977. That prison break was Mesrine's fourth.

Since his clandestine interview with freelance journalist Isabelle de Wangen, published in Paris Match in July, Messine has been silent. Police believe that he left the country in August when the great number of tourists made escape

France's public enemy No. 1, nonetheless, remains an obsession and a legend here.

"He's got the Robin Hood emage of the good bandit," said Jean Louis Pelletier, Mesrine's principal defender. Others liken Mesrine to Clyde, of the Bonnie and Clyde team, or to John Dillinger, the celebrated American bank robber of the 1930s.

'Charmer'

"He's charming and a charmer," said Miss de Wangen, who recently became Mrs. Pelletier. Her interview with Mesrine resulted in a law-

According to France's anti-gang brigade, an elite group of 50 who are trying to track Mesrine, the Paris prefecture receives several telephone calls every day from people who believe they have seen Mesrine — in a case, on the Avenue des Champs Elysees or in the Parc des Princes sports stadium.

While it can spend only a portion of its time chasing Mesrine, the brigade, too, is obsessed by the man. "Mesrine is a prisoner of his pride and his derring-do," said a high-level police official. "He is likely to mount a spectacular coup — like kidnapping government officials."

Mesrine was born into a milian of boursesis.

Mesrine was born into a milieu of bourgeois embroiderers far removed from the truands or petty criminals be was soon to know. By the time be was in elementary school, be knew be would become a gangster.

"I am sure," he wrote in L'Instinct de Mort, his autobiography, "that if I were asked what I wanted to be when I grew up, I would have said gangster as other children say fireman, lawyer or doctor.

Several times he tried to go straight, and after he served his first prisoo term he became a talented draftsman. But even the responsibilities of wife and child did not make him reform. By 1974, the last time he was captured, be had:

 Murdered a pimp.
 Burglarized the governor's mansion in Majorca.

 Attempted a kidnapping in Canada and escaped from prison there leaving two forest rangers dead.

 Returned to France and flamboyantly escaped in Compiegne, near Paris, by pulling a gun in court and threatening to shoot the judge. Executed innumerable bank robberies and petty apartment thefts and accumulated an impressive arsenal, hideouts all over France and a following of women who worshipped

The admiration for him apparently derives from what some see as a conscious moral code. and limitless courage, despite his propensity to kill. He has "an assemblage of qualities that appealed to women," said Mrs. Christiane Giletti, a lawyer for Mesrine who was speaking with him in the visiting room of the prison when he made his recent break. She was subsequently suspected of complicity and interrogated by police for 48 bours. The experience triggered ber disillusionment with the French legal system and ber resignation from the bar.

According to Mesrine's lawyers and to the convict's boastful autobiography, be is loyal to his friends and would do anything to bail them out of trouble, including an assault on a peni-tentiary, such as the one he mounted in Canada. He has a Mediterranean approach to honor and fidelity and would kill to avenge a friend's death or a woman's bonor. According to police and lawyers, he keeps his word and expects others to keep theirs. He has justified his bank holdups by criticizing the excesses of capitalism and vowed that he would not hurt women and

Most of all, Mesrine loves to thumb his nose at the police, executing his coups with boyish humor even though he often has left in a barrage of gunfire.

Once, according to his book, while being pursued by police, be disguised himself as a doctor and sneaked into a Paris hospital to see his dying father.

In May, after his prison escape, Mesrine held up the casino in Deauville. That morning he strode into the local police precinct, flashed a police ID card and demanded to see the chief.

Jacques Mesrine

When he was told the chief was not in, Mesrine simply said he would return and strode out, unrecognized as the country's most sought crim-

"People admire courage," said a high-ranking police official in explaining Mesrine's magne-tism. "They don't admire him. They'd be afraid if be walked into their living room. But they say, 'Hey, that's a real man.'

"He's someone out of the ordinary," said Mrs. Giletti, who received an invitation from Mesrine in June to meet him on the quai of a Paris train station. Mesrine wanted to apologize for the trouble he had caused her.

"Above all, be is very French," said Miss de Wangen, the court reporter who sold ber interview to Paris Match for the equivalent of $6,000. The issue containing the Mesrine toterview was a best-seller, second only to the issue on the late Pope Paul VI.

"Mesrine likes to receive people and to eat well. He is charming, polite and macho n la vielle mode. He opens the door for women and lights their cigarettes. When he smiles, he can get anything from anybody. He is patriotic and would do anything for his country.

Miss de Wangen said that she has received several letters from single women asking for an totroduction to Mesrine.

She met with Mesrine for six hours in the countryside near Paris after being driven there blindfolded. At his hideout, Mesrine opened a bottle of champagne. He peeled potatoes and roasted a leg of lamb. Dinner was accompanied by a good red wine. "For him, it was a festive occasion," said Miss de Wangen.

In the Land of Rising Sons

"He is fascinated by arms," Miss de Wangen said, "He has a child's jny for guns. He aimed one at me. Of course, it was loaded." She said that Mesrine is paranoid. "He wants people to speak about him. He is persuaded he has a mission to accomplish."

In the Paris Match interview, Mesrine dedicated himself in closing the top security sec-tions of French prisons because "they destroy men." He said he would rather die than be taken prisoner again.

That Mesrine is almost certain to die violently is a source of sadness for some. 'A Waste'

"It's a waste," said Pelletier who showed a visitor a New Year's card from Mesrine with an engraving of a blood-red face superimposed against a black guillotine. The card was evidence of Mesrine's artistic talents. Other cards dence of Mesrine's artistic talents. Other cards sent to Mesrine's publisher show literary flare. According to publisher Jean-Claude Lattes, Mesrine could have been a novelist. His book, a 333-page confession, has sold 13,000 copies since publication in March, 1977. Jean-Paul Belmondo bought the film rights about six months ago for more than $100,000. Theoretically, 50 percent goes to Mesrine, but in practice, his half will be frozen.

"This put is a writer." said Louis Nucera,

"This guy is a writer," said Louis Nucera, literary director for Lattes. Mr. Nucera read the manuscript when it arrived through another lawyer, Genevieve Aiche Miss Aiche was indicted for having distributed the book, al-though other lawyers say that Mesrine had permission to write it. The question is why such a talented man diverted his energies to crime. In his autobiograpby, Mesrine does not really explain his need for violence and his lust for the seamy side of life. He attributes it to his "bravado, taste for risk and money." Stealing, he says, is a kind of

He hims, however, at a consistent need to gain his father's attention. Mestine's father was often absent or preoccupied with work when he was growing up. Mesrine always felt hint by this lack of parental approval. But although Mesrine hints that his taste for crime is innate, his lawyers insist that different circumstances might have made him an excel-lent soldier or spy. Police officials admit that the years of solitary confinement probably made rehabilitation impossible.

"The police played into his hands," said Mrs.

Giletti. "They made him a star."

The answer to some of the questions may lie in Mesrine's next book which will be published in Canada this year. However, other more important issues at the core of Mesrine's case—the integrity of the legal profession, the rights of journalists, and the conditions of solitary confinement to prisons - have not been examined by the press or the government.

In the meantime, the French are waiting for Mesrine's next appearance. "He's got to steal," Pelletier said. "It's an economic necessity."

Ho Chi Minh City: A Portrait of Disaster

Facing antagonism from China and hampered by crop-destroying floods, the aging Communist leaders in Hanoi see only one solution: more enforced socialization, more confrontation, more repression."

By Joseph Firchert

DARIS, Oct. 27 (THT) - Life I in Saigon, three years after its fall and rebaptism as Ho Chi Minh City, is marked by harsh misrule, political oppression, acute food shortages, economic mismanagement and rampant official corruption, according to four French journalists who recently spent 10 days there gaining the most extensive access of any Western reporters since

Granted visas to report on "Cambodian atrocities," the French reporters — three of wbom had written sympathetically about North Vietnam during the war - found much more to report about the Hanoi regime's "disastrous" policies in what used to be South Vietnam.

In their view, Vietnam's leadership, molded by a lifetime at war, has been unable to adjust to

Facing antagonism from China and hampered by crop-de-stroying floods, the "aging Com-munist leaders in Hanoi see only one solution: more enforced socialization, more confrontation, more repression," the corre-spondent for Le Nouvel Observa-

teur wrote.
The main impact of Hanoi's tough policies is in the south. where North Vietnamese officials behave like an occupation force. . . while Saigon's inhabitants are cowed by bunger," Le Matin's correspondent wrote.

'Vietnam Gulag'

These views were corroborated by the reporters from Le Point and Le Monde. The report in Le Monde provoked an editorial about the "Vietnam gulag." By eluding official supervision, the four journalists managed to make contact with a number of South Vietnamese, including for-mer acquaintances. In their articles and in subsequent interviews, they agreed that conditions there are grim.

In Ho Chi Minh City, all key positions are held by North Vietnamese officials, all Communist Party cadres, whose importance can be roughly ranked, on sight by the number of ballpoint pens in their open-necked shirts -"the only insignia they can afford," the Le Point correspondent said, only half jokingly.

The northern officials move about the city in curtained U.S. sedans and live in requisitioned sedans and live in requiremental villas, whose garden walls have been topped with wire barriers.
"There is more barbed wire in Third." Ssigon today than under Thieu, said a reporter who had covered the last days of South Vietnam

under Premier Nguyen Van

The former U.S. Embassy has been converted into the central security headquarters, and prisons are undergoing expansion. The reporters were denied precise statistics, but they claim to bave received information sub-stantiating Vietnamese refugee claims that there are more political prisoners today than there were under the Thieu regime. Le Van Duyet prison in Ho Chi Minh City, notorious for packing 25 prisoners to a cell in the past, today bulges with 50 prisoners per cell, according to a witness. That is more than one inmate per square yard. Le Matin's corre-spondent calculated.

Thousands Disappear

Thousands of South Vietnamese, tocluding many former Viet Cong fighters, continue to disappear, the reporters said, often without trace, into "re-educa-tion camps," usually agriculture work camps lacking adequate nutrition or medicines.

One million South Vietnamese have been "rehabilitated and released," Hanoi spokesmen contend, but the human rights issue has caused the EEC to bold up $4 million worth of proposed aid for a Vietnam resettlement project. South Victnamese who had expected to be able to cooperate with the new regime in 1975 have found their bopes dashed. Bud-dhists and liberal journalists who opposed the Thieu regime are said to be in prison again, this time at Hanoi's order.

"The only difference is that the arrest orders come from the Communist Party, not Thicu's courts," a reporter said, "and neutral observers are no longer allowed to inspect prison overcrowding."

Hanoi confirmed on Wednesday reports by Victnamese refu-gees that the Buddhist leader Venerable Thich Thien Minh had died in a re-education camp 100 miles from Ho Chi Minh City. Mr. Minh had led opposition to successive regimes in South Viet-

The reporters had a brief meeting with Huynh Tan Phat, head of South Vietnam's short-lived provisional revolutionary govern-ment. He was quoted as having said: "Officially, we were sepa-rate [North Vietnam and the Viet Congl, but in fact we were the same thing all the time; there was a single party, a single govern-ment, a single capital, a single country."

This confirmation of Hanoi's historical control was all the more striking because Mr. Phat in the past had ardently main-tained that North Vietnam would never "swallow" the south and would allow a three-year transi-tion period — which, in fact, ended only a year after the capture

The meeting with Mr. Phat provided a rare glimpse of a for-mer Viet Cong official. As usual, the reporters were handed a paper containing stereotyped re-plies to questions that they had posed in advance, and their North Vietnamese escort said afterwards that their account should be restricted to the written interview, ignoring Mr.

Phat's oral remarks.

In Ho Chi Minh City, "whose streets appear too wide and too well-paved today for the amount of surviving traffic," many shops bave shut, but those remaining about one in three - offer "a variety and quality of goods un-thinkable to Hanoi," the Le Point reporter wrote.

As a result, the North Viet-namese have decided to cut Ho Chi Minh City down to size, lit-erally, by reducing the popula-tion from 3.5 million to perhaps

In an effort to drive Saigonese into the countryside, commerce has been oationalized and an inefficient ration system imposed. South Vietnamese are denied jobs commensurate with their skills. The reporters found that Cholon, the once-bustling Chinese quarter, has emptied about half of its million ethnic Chinese by truckloads in night-time raids organized by the authorities.

However, the Hanoi-dictated farm policy reportedly has backfired because of forced collectiv-ization, which provoked a silent peasant rebellion.

Crops Sabotaged

Irate peasants have started to sabotage their rice crops rather than raise it to sell it on the lowpaying official market. Pig-rearing, another traditional namese activity, has been prohibited in some areas in an unavailing effort to force more rice onto the market after farmers started feeding it to their livestock

The food crisis - triggered by the end of Chinese aid to North Vietnam and U.S. aid to South Vietnam — has worsened because of severe flooding in the Mekong Delta and epidemics of pests due to new fertilizers. In-stead of a green revolution Vietnam last year had a two-millionton rice shortage. The figure has doubled this year.

The lack of food has become the overriding national issue.

Although the official monthly ration of rice is 12 kilograms for a cormally-employed person, only one kilogram can be found at controlled prices, according to the reporters. An additional four kilograms are obtainable for the private market price, they said, but this amounts to half a techni-cian's monthly salary. The substitute grains comprise the other seven kilograms. These hardship conditions are giving rise to a rapid revival of corruptioo, the reporters agreed. To leave by boat, an ethnic Chinese must pay 12 taels of gold, roughly equivalent to $3,000, of which less than half reaches the government coffer. The rest goes ... to semi-official middlemen, mostly North Vicinamese party officials.

Telling Letter

As further evidence of the conditions, Le Moode this week carried a letter obtained by its correspoodent from a South Vietnamese intellectual and published under the title "The Revolution is Dead." The letter, whose authenticity is vouched for by Le Monde, said: "Our people were fed up with the corruption and with the last war, and were ready to ac cept something new. . . [but] we have tumbled from one war to another [against Cambodia]. from one regime's corruption to another's, which is worse because of the incompetence and tyranny of a breed of officials who are loyal [to the party] but ignorant."

Faced with an economic crisis at home, the Hanoi regime has escalated its Cambodian war and gone on the offensive in Lacs, where poison gas has been used against dissident Mco montagnard tribesmen, the reporters said. This foreign policy can be explained partly by traditional Victnamese fears of Chinese

However, the letter from the intellectual said that South Victnamese were starting to desert the army and evade military service on the Cambodian front They are unwilling to light for "detested [North Vietnamese] leaders on empty stomachs, with a prehistoric medical service that makes any wound a death sentence," it said.

For the first time, a major museom focuses on the work of a single Renaissance bronze-maker. Of the 269 mems, the majority are sta-mettes that would have been conpemphously brushed aside as so many specimens of "minor art" oot long ago. Even more remarkable, no one can tell how many of them deserve to be classified as Giambologua's work.

Born in 1529 in Doual, in the French-speaking part of the then-independent Flanders, Jean Boulogne trained under sculptor Jacques Dubroeucq, who had been to Rome and developed an Italianate manner. Probably around 1550, Boulogne went to Rome, where he fell under the spell of ancient Roman carving. In Florence on his trip home, he met his first rich patron, Francesco de Medici, who persuaded him to settle there.

Michelangelo's work in Florence was the second decisive influence on Giambologna's work. The first of his great marble group sculp-tures, "Samson Slaying a Philis-tine," preserved in the Victoria and Albert Museum collections. Albert Museum collection, recalls a project of Michelangelo's of the 1520s, as Charles Avery points out in the catalog Giambologna, however, made a major contribution of his own from the outset: He introduced a sense of motioo into sculpture. His is a swift, swirling movement, caught at the point of extreme tension when a precarious balance seemingly is about to be undone. The masterpiece is his "Mercury in Flight." with the winged Greek deity stand-ing oo tiptoe, body beot forward as in full run, right arm raised skyward and left arm bent at the elbow and twisted slightly rear-ward. It made Giambologoa throughout Europe.

Lost Wax Casting

The reasons for the ambiguity lie in the techniques used by Giambologna and most Renaissance bronze-makers, and in Renaissance studio organization. The technique known as lost wax casting is ex-plained in the exhibition, with piecprainted in the extension, with pieces illustrating all its stages; first the model, modded in wax over a fire-clay core; then a plaster shell in which it is embedded — excepting tubular openings made by sticking pipes into the shell while still soft; then the pouring of molten bronze through some openings; and finally the breaking of the shell and trimming of the bronze.

The artist naturally made the wax model himself. But after that assistants took over. The crucial operatioo is the afterwork done on

BOOKS

By Jerome Charyn. Arbor House. 315 pp. $9.95. Reviewed by Herbert Gold

SECRET ISAAC

Jerome Charyn has wandered amazed by fist, teeth, worms, crime and language in his utterly convincing gargoyle world of isaac the Pure, the Brave, the Good; Isaac Sidel, New York Jewish cop.

"Blue Eyes" told of Monfred Cohen, his angel detective, earnest, beautiful, not too bright. "Marilyn the Wild" told of Isaac's nymphomaniac half-Irish daughter, who always said Yes when she hadn't always ought to. "The Education of Patrick Silver" dealt with a lurking defrocked officer for whom crimeprevention and crime are separated only by a hyphen. "Secret Isaac" portrays Isaac Sidel at the end of his tether, negligently falling in love, aging caten, gloomy beyond redemption as he watches himself lose the ones he loves and himself also. The jackals are barking. Isaac the Pure feels much less pure these days.

The passions of Marilyn, Isaac and of the lovers and haters and magic criminals who surrounded them made "Marilyn the Wild" most engrossing as a story: real daughter, real father, real lovers and husbands and pickpockets and gangs. But it now seems clear that Charyn's real concern in these nov-els is not psychology, action or so-cial density but language. Out of the materials of the detective novel and urban realism, he has created the poetry of a furious rhetoric.

There is the energy and desperation of quest, but no possible way to discover the undefined grail of peace and connection with others. Charyn has perfected his voice as he lives in it and its laws are so certain that he achieves a densely felt life despite the absence of conventi-onal feeling or motivation.

Fantasy Secus Real

Everything is fantasy and nothing seems merely "made up." These gargoyles yearn, hunger, bleed. One believes in the armor-headed tapeworm which eats Isaac and one believes that Isaac does not bother to remove it from his guts. One be-lieves in the hoods who study James Joyce, and the secret bank accounts that are in the names of Anna Livia Plurabelle and Molly Bloom. One believes that the teeth of a weary old Jewish boss cop walk near the ground as he pursues pimps and racketeers to Ireland — just as one can believe that bureaucrats become giant noses in Gogol's St. Petersburg. The language of both Gogol and Charyn finds truths otherwise inaccessible.

kind of manic enjoyment in Charyn's fans. They are not difficult to follow. The boiling invention leaves no sense of puzzlement. The pleasure of fantasy, of fantasy without year ago after working there for limit, laid against familiar corruptions, lusts, puts one in a state of hallucination, neither awake nor asleep. The dream is alert, with perky ears and a nasty snari. Charyn is an inspired liar who does not need to pretend he is telling the truth. Increasingly, he seems to be abandoning his gritty knowledge and feeling for New York, cops, wom-

Reading these books produces a

THIS is the fourth book in which en, the metropolitan jungle, in favor of a vision which treats comedy in dead carnest, tragic failure as fatal comedy, all of it as a means to verbs. He hits Chagall's cows with his violin and knocks them out of the sky.

Readily Accepted

The astonishing thing is how readily his enterprise can be accepted by the reader. Obsession is energized by gift; there is a lesson for paranoids in this - how not to waste their griefs, Isaac falls in love with a hooker, impregnates a politi-cian's wife, telephones his own old wife in the middle of the night, keens silently over the daughter who has been married seven times before the age of 30.
Isaac blackens his fate and lives as a hawking bum in a sleazy mid-town hotel, reaching for the secret connections leading from pimps and whores toward graduates of Columbia University. The worm gnaws. Isaac elects a slyly senile mayor by courting aged synagogue-goers with his silver tongue. Crooked retired cops slay his friends, his enemies, each other. The worlds of the police and prosti-tution are criss-crossed and inked, as indeed they really are. The center does not hold, but things happen. Language, subtle, bold, funny, extended into poetry, absolutely Charyn's central possession, keeps all this in order. A prime element of story is mag-ic, the unreal made real and the real made unreal "Secret Isaac," and Charyn's rapidly accruing body of fiction, do the commuous, essential work of magic-making with an absolutely singular and piercing

The Vikings, struggling to retain heir National Foothall Conference Central Division title, raised their ecord to 5-4. The loss knocked Dallas out of a first-place tie with Washington in the NFC East. The Cowboys now are 6-3. Jittery Dallas committed two blunders in the first period and Tarkenton made the Cowboys pay with two touchdown drives.

Tarkenton hit Chuck Foreman with B 4-yard touchdown pass after Larry Brinson had fumbled away he opening kickoff. And he whipped the Vikings on a 37-yard coring drive after Tony Dorsett 1ad lost the hall on the next series. Rickey Young scored on a 4-yard un after Dallas' second turnover

Tarkenton's 12-yard touchdown pass to Sammy White with 29 seconds left in the second period gave the Vikings a comfortable 21-3 lead at halftime. Tarkenton came out throwing again in the second half hut the em-

Olympic Gold Medalist Wins Men's Gymnastic Crown

27 (AP)— Olympic gold medalist Nikolai Andrianov of the Soviet Union took the gold medal today in the men's individual combined exercises at the world gymnastics championships here with a score of 117.2. Eizo Ken-motsu of Japan won the silver medal with 116.55 and Alexander Ditiatin of the Soviet Union was third at 116.375

The Soviet gymnast, who earlier in the week seemed hopelessly error prone, turned in a stellar performance, climaxed by 9.90 points on the rings and two 9.85s on the floor and vault

His performance settled speculation over his ability versus Japanese former world champion Shigeru Kasamatsu.

Kasamatsu missed the 1976 Olympics because of an operation, raising speculation that Andrianov's gold medal there was a hollow victory. But the Japanese placed only 7th here. Reuters reported that

Kasamatsu ruined his chances by falling off in the middle of his exercise on the pommel horse, a discipline that requires great control and strength. The other top placers were

Eberhard Gienger of West Germany, fourth with 116.20, Hiroji Kajiyama of Japan, fifth with 115,90, and Kuri Thomas of the United States, sixth with Thomas showed his best in the floor and vault exercises, his traditional strong points, but garnered an unexpectedly low

9.50 in the rings. The other U.S. gymnast to

Italy Auto Club Says Prix to Stay at Monza

ROME, Oct. 27 (AP) - The Italian Automobile Club said today that next year's Grand Prix of Italy Formula One race will be held at the Monza track, contradicting yesterday's announcement in London that it would be shifted to Imola near Bologna.

The announcement was expected to trigger a war between Italian organizers and the Formula One Constructors Association that has criticized the Monza track repeatedly as too dangerous. Swedish driver Ronnie Peterson was killed in a 10-car crash at the start of this year's race.

Broncos Hold Slight Edge Over Seahawks

By William N. Wallace NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (NYT) — Like Denver a year ago, the city of Seattle has generated tremendous enthusiasm for its football team, the Seahawks, and every seat in the huge indoor stadium, the King-dome, will be filled for Sunday's game. Denver Broncos, are the opponents. Previews of all games follow, with won-lost records in

American Conference

Denver (5-3) at Seattle (4-4) -Broncos won the earlier game, 28-7, hut it was on grass in Denver. Seahawks thrive on the Kingdome's speedy AstroTurf. Their hig scorer, David Sims, who has eight touch-downs, won't play and Don Testerman is the replacement. Denver's running game has worn thin and Craig Morton had to try 33 passes in loss to Baltimore. That's not the Bronco style. Betting line: Denver by 3½ points.

New York Jets (5-3) at New England (6-2) — Patriots are rolling with five victories in a row. The speed of Horace Ivory, No.-2 half-hack, is the latest embellishment. Jets' Matt Robinson, the neophyte quarterback, looked good against Bills, Colts and Cardinals hut Pats' linehackers are of a different kind of steel. His hest chance will be to throw outside to wide receivers.

Betting line: New England by 9.
Baltimore (3-5) at Miami (5-3) — Now Bill Troup is out with a hro-ken hand so Colts' quarterback choices are Mike Kirkland or Bert Jones who is still healing a sore shoulder. Their defense has finally tightened up and Miami hopes its defense will too. Bob Griese is back at quarterback and as effective as ever. Betting line: Miami by 12. Buffalo (3-5) at Cleveland (4-4)

- Browns still have not recovered from 20-point loss to Pittshurgh two weeks ago. Now Cleo Miller, the fullhack who can block so well, is out. Brian Sipe, the quarterback hurt last Sunday, is ready, Bills have not been the same since the Jess thrashed them, 45-14. Their of-fense vanished and they never had much defense. Betting line: Cleveland by 614.

Houston (5-3) at Cincinnati (0-8)

Houston's three long touchdown drives, featuring Earl Campbell, were tremendous against Steelers. in the past, Oilers have never sustained their success for long. But Dan Pastorini is the league's leastsacked quarterhack this season. Bengals' leading asset is the punter, Pat McInally, who has had plenty of practice. Betting line: Houston

Kansas City (2-6) at Pittsburgh (7-1) — When Chiefs fall behind early against strong teams they die because the run-oriented offense cannot play catch-up. That's likely to happen in this game, Betting line: Pittshurgh hy 14. San Diego (2-6) at Oakland (5-3)

— Both teams played horribly last Sunday. Raiders won the earlier game in San Diego. 21-20, on Ken Stabler's forward fumble. He has had 19 passes intercepted or 9 per PIS OF OA cent of his attempts and some were inexcusable. Chargers last won a game in Oakland 10 years ago and have a long list of injuries. Betting line: Oakland by 7.

National Conference

Tampa Bay (4-4) at Green Bay (6-2) — Since their 26-game losing streak ended last December, the Buccaneers have won 6 of their last 10 games and respectability. Doug Williams, the erratic rookie, is a powerful rollout quarterback who will give the wohbly Pack fits. Bucs' tough defense will force Packers to pass and they are not too good at. that. Betting line: Packers by 5½.

Detroit (2-6) at Chicago (3-5) -Lions finally found an offense and scored 31 points on San Diego. The new quarterback, Gary Danielson, has helped. Bears have now lost five in a row and Walter Payton gained only 34 yards against Tampa Bay. Defense cannot hold any-one for long with new cornerbacks especially vulnerable. Betting line: Chicago by 5½. St. Louis (0-8) at Philadelphia (4-4) — Can Cardinals lose all 16 games? They certainly can. Steve Pisarkiewicz will be the quarterback again and Jim Bakken, the 38-year-old kicker, will also punt be-cause Steve Little, the disappointing rookie, has a sore leg. Eagles have lost their best blocking back, Mike Hogan. But their fine defensive team will be in command of this game. Betting line: Philadelphia by 11. San Francisco (1-7) at Washington (6-2) — Redskins will replace injured Lemar Parrish with Gerard Villiams who was burned often at cornerback last season. Joe Theismann has fine opportunity to regain his passing skills against a vulnerable defense. John Riggins has been carrying the offense. O.J. Simpson somehow has gained 532 yards for 49ers. Betting line: Washington by 101/2.

New York Giants (5-3) at New Orleans (4-4) — What's the value of Orleans (4-4) — What's the value of an offensive tackie. Giants will find out as Gordon King, a raw rookie, replaces injured Ron Mikolajczyk who had played so well. King is matched against Elois Grooms, a good defensive end. Larry Mallory must bold up at strong safety in place of Beasley Reece, also out for year. Saints' Archie sarery in place of Beasley Reece, also out for year. Saints' Archie Manning having a big season with 60 per cent of his passes completed. Betting line: New Orleans by !.

Los Angeles (7-1) at Atlanta (4-4) — Rams won the earlier game at home, 10-0. Penalties and turnovers were behind their loss to Saints. Good teams usually bounce hack after an upset, don't they? A field goal with one second left enabled Falcons to beat feehle 49ers. The quarterback, Steve Bartkowski, is doing a lot better. Betting line: Los Angeles by 7.

In Meeting With Arizona

UCLA Coach Fights Overconfidence

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (UPI) -UCLA may be thinking ahead to its Nov. 18 meeting with the University of Southern California as the key game in the march toward the Rose Bowl, but the Bruins can't afford to relax tonight against a newcomer to the Pacific-10. Ari-

UCLA is a 131/2-point favorite over Arizona. The game could turn on the way the teams react to what bappened last weekend. UCLA, 4-0 in league play and 6-1 overall, is coming off a 45-0 romp over California in which it set a Pac-10 record with 10 interceptions. Arizona, 1-1 in conference play and 3-3 overall, had the weekend off to regroup after losing at California, Judging by their showings against California, UCLA might be expected to wallop Arizona by 50 or 60 points. But Bruin coach Terry Donahue is showing repect for the Wildcats and possible concern that his team may go into the game with too much confidence.

"Arizona has a great advantage with the week's hye," Donahue said. "Arizona can't be taken lightly. I've seen films of their game with Michigan and it was dead even. Michigan had trouble running on them with any degree of consistency. They hurt them throwing the hall."

With Oregon and Oregon State coming up on the Bruin schedule after Arizona, UCLA has the edge in the race for the Rose Bowl Rose Bowl preseason favorite University of Southern California, with a 2-Pac-10 mark; will meet UCLA Nov. 18. "On hoth sides of the football," said Arizona coach Tony Mason, "I haven't seen anybody with as many players as UCLA." Of last weekend's UCLA-Cal game, Mason noted, "Cal played completely different from the way they played us. I don't know that they didn't try too much and hurt themselves more than their opponents. Nothing they did seemed to bother UCLA." Arizona's main offensive weap-ons are quarterback Jim Krohn and tailback Larry Heater. Krohn has completed 47 of 85 passes for 627 yards and five touchdowns, and Heater has rushed for 412 yards and four TDs on 89 carries. UCLA hasn't had the passing attack it thought it would have this year. Quarterback Rick Bashore is 43 for 86 for 511 yards and one

UCLA has posted four victories 531 yards and six touchdowns, in a row — Minnesota, Stanford, respectively.

If It's Monday, This Is TV Week

WASHINGTON — The saying that one can't play God doesn't hold true for televisioo networks. They are playing God every week, at least it seems like that when you read about the fight for television ratings.

In the B.S. (Before Silverman) days, the networks used to move shows around if they weren't working. But as the competition got tougher and the stakes higher, they began to move nights around. Now that we're into midscason, all the octworks are starting to do that Buchwald to see if they can come up with better Nielsen numbers.

This is what is going on. There is a large boardroom. At one end are charts of all the shows on each network schedule and the nights they appear on the air. They're bung on hooks so they can be moved Zellerbach, the network's Vice President in Charge of Darkness, says, "All right, let's face it. Mon-day didn't work. Let's move Monday night to Thursday."

Trembling, the program director, says, "Wait. Thursday is starting to look strong. If we put Monday night in there we could lose our momentum."

Piltdown, the Vice President for Sales, says, "Where would YOU put Monday night?"
"Friday," Trembling says. "I wanted to put Monday night on Friday from the start, but you guys fought me and said Monday night should be slotted on Monday."

"That was at the beginning of the season," Zellerbach says. "We had to give it a try on the night we had it originally scheduled for."

Ringading, the network's affiliate man, says, "Suppose the stations go along with you putting Monday night on Friday. Where do you intend to put Friday?"

"On Monday?" Trembling says,
"It won't work," Zellerbach says,
"We're oot doing any better on Friday than we are on Monday. If we're going to move Monday fur-ther down the week we have to move up something strong in its

"What's wroog with Wednesday?" Piltdown wants to know.

"Not Wednesday!" Trembling shouts. "Wednesday is our strongest night. If we put it on Monday we could lose not only Wednesday but Tuesday as well."

Ringading says, "I'm oot so sure. If we could start off the week with Wednesday, we could pick up points for Tuesday as well as Monday, if it was slotted in Wednesday's place."

Zellerbach says, "We can give it a try. If it doesn't work, we can always put Wednesday back beginning the first of the year."

"Does anyone want to talk about Saturday? "Do we have to?" Piltdown says.

"Well, we can't leave it where it is," Trembling says. "I think Saturday should be oo Thursday." Zellerbach says, "Do you think our Thursday night audience can wait until Saturday to see it?"

"Yes," saws Trembling, "because we move Saturday to Thursday the other two networks will be forced to counter-program us with their Saturday shows. Once they panic, we'll move Thursday back to its original place and sweep the Trembling says, "You forgot Sunday night."

"I must be getting groggy. What are we going to do about Sunday?"

Zellerbach says. Piltdown replies, "Why can't we leave Sunday where it is?" Ringading replies, "Because we'll confuse the audiences. We can't leave Sunday alone." Trembling says, "He's right. Maybe we could sneak Sunday in on Tuesday, except for the football move the entire week around and

Piltdown says, "Why can't we move the football games, too?" Zellerbach says, "Who do you think we are - God?" By Paul Richard WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (WP) — Nelson Rocke-feller has a lot of money — he is, as the song says, as "rich as Rockefeller" — but he returned to Washington this week to make more.

Once he was vice president of the United States. Today he is a 70-year-old salesman and is good at his trade.

Like most successful salesmen, he admires his own wares. "Isn't that just beautiful?" he asks, beaming with delight at a photo he is peddling. The light-ing is the best that I've ever

The photo, a "Cibachrome" he calls it, shows a 1910 canvas by Picasso. You can buy it, framed — the photo, not the painting — for $850. It is on sale in the upstairs gift shop at Neiman-Marcus here. Also available are the plates, andirons, statues and candlesticks he's selling. Rockefeller calls them beautiful reproductions of great art."

16,000 Pieces

He began collecting half a century ago, and he calculates that be now owns some 16,000 pieces - European and Chinese porcelains, American weather-vanes, paintings by Cezanne, Degas, Bonnard and many other masters, and tables, earnings, toys. His new catalog (his first he says there will be more) offers reproductions of 124 of his col-lection, and includes a little of everything. Most are being made in unlimited editions.

A Look at the Fine Art Of Reproducing Money

How should one address him? Governor? Mr. Vice President? Hey, just call me Nelson," he said, hand outthrust.
Several of his old friends here believe they can explain his going into business. "He's competing with his brothers," said one of them. "All those years while they were out there earning money, he was busy spending it on political campaigns. He is trying to replenish the Rocke-feller coffers. He's selling his houses and his reproductions. He's trying to catch up."

Comments Rockefeller: "That may be an underlying motive, but I happen to feel art is a major force in people's lives. You need to lose yourself, to find tranquility in beauty. It's a joy I want to share."

He has begin to share it by entering what he calls big business." Already he has hired 13 people, and he has mailed out 470,000 copies of his gold-and-purple mail-order catalog. "Tru-ly great works of art have withstood the test of time and steadily gained in appreciation ... "goes part of his "Dear Friend" note. "Indeed, art is even being purchased as a hedge against

Sneers

Rockefeller knows that many in the art world sneer at the idea of prestige reproductions. "I expected a lot more criticism," he

"Why spend $7,500 for a copy of a work just because he owns it?" asks one local art historian.
"Why buy his export china?
There is no shortage of originals. I wouldn't pay a nickle for one piece of that shlock." "His pieces cost as much as many respectable originals," ob-serves Joshua Taylor, director of the National Collection of Fine Arts. "I don't object to simple reproductions, but his pretend to be surrogates for the actual objects. Why don't people go out, use their eyes and buy works of art on their own?" Rockefeller's bronzes, copies cast from Rodins and Nadel-mans and African originals, seem to be good copies, but the "paintings" he is selling an-counce themselves as phonies at first glance. When one looks at an original, the shadow-casting brushstrokes and threads of woven canvas are seen in three dimensions. In Rockefeller's photos, they've been flattened into two.

"I happen to have a Cibachrome in my home right now, Nobody who comes in can tell the difference," Rockefeller says.

"The difference between an original and a copy might appear quite narrow — if you look at art as decoration," says Carter Brown, the National Gallery's director. "But scholars and museums see that gap as a chasm. Museums have an obligation to authenticity and history. Nelson Rockefeller is a private individual, not an art museum. This is a free society. He can do anything he wants.

Nibbling off 'Meissen'

During his tenure as vice president, when Rockefeller lived in Washington, he was rarely seen in galleries or museums, but he did keep up with art through photographic reproductions. "I read catalogs every night," he says. At home he eats off Meissen plates that are copies of antiques. At his office he hangs Cibachromes. "I have increasingly, myself, shifted over to reproductioos." Rockefeller maintains, with a PS:
"Sale are constructed." "Sales are going very well."

Solos El Capitan

Movie Stuntwoman

Beverly Johnson, 31, of Los Angeles, reached the summit of El Capitan in Yosemite National Park in California, the first woman to solo climb the sheer, 3,000-foot vertical wall. After the movie stuntwoman finished her 10-day climb, she hiked down a back trail to Yo-semite Valley. Chief park ranger Bill Wendt, describing the climb, said, "It's risky to climb it with a dozen people. We had a triple fatality May 14. All three came off. To do it solo is really quite a feat." Admits Johnson: "Lots of times I thought I would give up. But there were not any choices. If you stood on one of those ledges and looked down... You just go up." The slender, muscular woman carried about 100 pounds of gear — including a tent, sleeping sling, ropes, food, water, and pitons to hammer into the sheer granite wall. Her next stop: New Guinea, where she'll parachute into the jungle. * * *

She's been a star - both in show biz and as a representative at the United Nations - and she's written five books, but that's not enough for "Pearlie Mae." Now, at 50, Pearl Bailey is pushing for a college degree at Washington's Georgetown University where she's enrolled as "an upper freshperson." Says she: "I always wanted to be a teacher . . . As in the Bible, 'Be ye also ready.' I was in the hospital in August, Suppose I could never do anything else? I could sit and teach. I will have that paper [diploma] and if I am called on, I am ready."

Wines can thus be classified in terms of the medicinal values they derive from their places of origin, Maury says, and can be recom-mended as ancillary medication of this or that physical deficiency. Three examples:

· He recommends Medoc to persons susceptible of allergic con-mended to people suffering from anemia because of its iron content, which will help bring up the oumber of red blood cells, Maury says.

Sancerre and Pouilly are suggested as good against gallstooes because of certain dissolving properties of some of their components, he reports.

Most unexpected on Maury's list is the mention of diabetes. There the doctor suggests young red wines, because of their high vitamin content, apt to stimulate the com-bustion of sugar and fats. Also, apparently, young wines have a ou-tritive value that can usefully take
